COMMENT ON THE SITUATION.

With the fall of Bucharest the central powers are now in possession of four capitals of Entente allied states, the others being Brussels, Beigrade and Cettinje.

In the Carpathian region near the Bukowina frontier and along the Moldavia front the Russian offensive apparently is meeting with little success. West of Jabioniza the Russians occupied a height, but later were shelled off the position, by the Germans. To the south they penetrated to the second line of the German defenses in the Trotus Valley, but here were held from further advance. North of the Oituz Pass and southeast of Kedzi Varsahely the Austro-Germans took positions from the Russians. Additional fortified heights northeast of Budimirtian in Berbia, have been captured by the Berbia, have been captured by the Berbia, have expelled the Serbs from the Bulgarians and Germans, according to Saloniki, while the Bulgarians are reported by Berlin to have expelled the Serbs from positions near Gradeshnitza. A heavy bombardment is in progress north of Monastir. The Germans have again cassayed a somewhat intense attack in the Verdun sector, east of the famous hill, No. 204, near Avocourt. According to Paris, the attack was parily successful, the Germans gaining a footing in some of the advanced French trenches.

ployment, and persuasion may be used to induce them to refuse or quit employment.

"Undoubtedly ploketing and persuasion would interfere with the plaintiff's conduct of its business in making it more difficult for them to retain old employees and hire new ones. Indeed the very act of striking often seriously interferes with that free and unrestraind control of the employers' business. But the lawfulness of the strike is not to be tested by such incidental effect of it.

"The order in the present case falls to recognize this difference between the lawful means of interfering with another's business as an incident to the party's own right and unlawful means adopted by the same party.

"Methods may be considered lawful even though the employers' business interfered with because such methods are incidental to the right of the employee, which right should be and is recognized as equal to the right of the employer."

The decision was handed down by Justices Mack, Alachuler and Evans.

sides predicted the measure would be passed before adjournment.

Senator Owen said he would withhold for the present, at least, his resolution to direct a special investigation into campaign expenditures of all political parties in the recent national election because of the assurances from Republican Senators they would act in good failt to effect the passage of a measure that would prevent lavish expenditures of money and remove opportunity for corruption in future campaigns.

Several amendments were offered during the day, among them one by Senator Kenyon to penalize election betting by a fine of $500 for each offense. Senator Works proposed an amendment which would limit individual contributions to a campaign fund of $100 to be paid only to recognized political committees.

Senator Sherman, Republican, objected to limiting campaign expenditures in behalf of a Senatorial candidate to $5000, declaring the language of the bill was not clear whether this referred to both primaries and elections, or would allow a total for both of $10,000. The Illinois Senator also contended it was unfair to make the same standard for States small in territory or popuseason.

Henry Schoenefeld has trained the string section of his pleasing musical combination into the manners of greater technical finish and finer tone quality. While the wind instrument division remains somewhat in arrests in these particulars, it is not nearly so backward as heretofore, and attends its quota of duties in a way to contribute to better balance.

Lightness of mood and gladness of interpretation found their meeting ground first in the Overture to "Preciosa," by Weber, and carried out their common aim of affording enjoyment in the "Leonore" March by Raff, Menuetto in E flat (Haydn, and "Sallet Russe" (Laighi.)

The novelty number of the programme was fully in line with the others. This novelty consisted of two lyric pleces by Morton F. Orpheum.

Only two of this week's Orpheum acts will be held over during the coming week. These are "The Forest Fire" an Josie Heather.

Sophie Tucker heads the list of six new acts opening Monday. Miss Tucker is known as the Mary Garden of ragtime and she brings with her five kings of syncopation. Though famous throughout the East, Miss Tucker has never before been seen on the Orpheum time.

Other attractions on the bill will be a playlet entitled "Cranberries," done by Edward S. Buskey and company; Bert Fitsgibbons billed as "the original daffydil;" Raymond and Caverly, the Dutch comedians; John Geiger with his "talkting violin," and the four Readings in a casting act.

CHIEF EVENTS OF TESTERDAY.

(At Home:) Relaxation of money rates prompted fresh speculative ventures among Wall street brokers, although the movement of stocks still was irregular. Easing of the call-loan situation was ascribed to another inflow of British gold, as well as to consignments from Russia. International bonds were characterized by further heaviness.

SITTING ON MR. CLEWS.
Henry Clews, the New York financier.

Henry Clews, the New York financier, has been advised by the Army and Navy Journal in courteous but scarcastic words to confine himself to something he knows, and stop trying to advise the Navy De-

Says the Journal:

"It is strange how much more a man learns as to the conduct of war by conducting a prosperous business in Wall street than it is possible for military and naval experts to learn by devoting a lifetime to the study of their specialties. This is illustrated by the statements made in a lecture by that estimable gentleman, Mr. Henry Clews, the New York banker. Mr. Clews said he believed that by increasing without limit our supplies of guns, airplanes, submarines and other war machinery we would go far toward keeping the country from being drawn into war now or hereafter. "The dreadnaught launched a while ago is reported to have cost $16,000,000, said he. This kind of vessel, formidable as it appears, would be sent to the bottom in an instant if struck by a torpedo, as has been repeatedly demonstrated. The expenditure for the three or four dreadnaughts now under construction would build shough war weapons such as I have mentioned to fortify and render impregnable all the weak spots on our coasts. Mr. Clews reaches his conclusions by ignoring the factors which lead those who have made a professional study of the subject to a different result. May we be pardoned if we ask the astute Mr. Clews to give us the names of the dreadnaughts sunk by torpedoes during the present streamous war? In the record we have kept very carefully, and which we have supposed to be complete, we do not find entered the name of a single dreadnaught sunk by torpedoes. One German dreadnaught was sunk by gun fire in battle, and an Italian dreadnaught by internal explosion."

It used to be that a man's standing in the community was indicated by the fact that he could afford a motor car. Now the acid test is, Did he have two eggs for his son, following the customs of other Presidents and the dictates of the Constitution of the United States, laid before the members of Congress his views on national legislation. Following his own custom, he did this in person, appearing like the King of England and reading his message to the legislative body.

The President's message has one merit—ti is short. He frankly begins by stating that the work cut out for the Congress is the completion of a programme mapped by that the work cut out for the Congress is the completion of a programme mapped by himself in a former session. Most of the recommendations of Mr. Wilson will meet with the hearty and undivided approval of all intelligent Americans. That Porto Rico, for example, should have more liberty of action; that the Interstate Commerce Commission should be enlarged; that the government should be permitted to take over the railroads and operate them for military uses in case of a war—are matters which there is no room to dispute.

The piece de resistance in the message is there is no room to dispute.

The piece de resistance in the message is of course the completion of Mr. Wilson's ideas about arbitration or conciliation in case of disputes in the industrial world between labor and capital. When the President comes to deal with this vexed subject it appears to us that the words of Walter Scott are applicable: "Oh, what a tangled web we weave when first we practice to deceive!" It appears to us that the President tied a knot with his tongue when he put through the Adamson bill that it will take all his teeth to undo. He refers to that act as intended to make eight hours the legal measure of a day's work for rail-that act as intended to make eight hours the legal measure of a day's work for railroad men engaged in the operation of trains. He limits the scope of the act definitely to this remedial effect on the train men.

He sees that the increase of wages granted to these men can not be met by the railroads under the present freight rates fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission and enforced by all the functions of the government. He therefore wishes Congress to authorize the commission to increase freight rates so as to meet the deficit sure to be present in most railroads begress to authorize the commission to increase freight rates so as to meet the deficit sure to be present in most railroads because of the increased pay to railroad employees affected by the Adamson act.

Then the President wants some means established by act of Congress by which country-wide disturbance in industrial activities may be prevented in the future in case of disputes between the employers and the employees. He throws this burden on the shoulders of the legislative body where of course it belongs. He will find it is no simple thing to bring about a regulation of this subject by law. The President owes his re-election largely to the Adamson bill, granted to the clamor of the railroad employees who held him up, not with a bayonet point, but at the ballot box just before the election. Mr. Gompers is very close to President Wilson's ear, and Mr. Wilson's mouth is prone to re-echo the words whispered by Gompers in his public utterances.

As a tub thrown to a whale saves the beat, so the Adamson law saved Mr. Wilson from defeat at the polls on November?. That may have been the purpose consciously in the President's own mind; but whether this is true or not, he will find that he has put his foot into an entangling rope that will make further progress difficult. Unfortunately, not only the President's foot is caught, but he has tangled up the feet of the legislative body of the country as well. The Adamson law is now before the Supreme Court for a decision as to its constitutionality, and if it should be declared unconstitutional, that decision would carry with it all the amendments on the original act.

The raising of freight rates will necessarily raise the cost of living to every person in the United States or lower the price paid to the producer of every commodity transported by the railroads, whether the products of the soil of the country, of the mills or mines, and includes everything produced in the fields and factories of the country. Either result will be very unwelcome to those affected. When Mr. Wilson was elected the first time he and the Congress back of him promised to reduce the cost of living. In promised to reduce the cost of living. In the four years of his term the cost of living has increased—how much? Forty per cent?

THE PERIL OF THE STREETS. THE PERMI OF THE STREETS.

The Times has another suggestion to make for public safety. It is for the passage of an ordinance to regulate the inexpert driving of automobiles. Before we allow a doctor to give people pilla, we insist that he shall pass a rigid examination. No lawyer is permitted to argue a case in court until he has been quizzed by the examiners. The capacity for harm of an amateur doctor or ignorant lawyer is distinctly limited. Yet we insist upon safety.

But the only qualification required of a

But the only qualification required of a chauffeur in charge of a machine that can travel eighty miles an hour is a seat behind a steering wheel. Anyone who is 16 years old and soher can practice driving on Broad-way. Anyone who can hold the steering wheel But the only qualification required of a of a car can go roaring down a city street endangering the lives of everybody on the thoroughfare from one end to the other, thoroughfare from one end to the other.

If a man who had never been in a railway locomotive before should attempt to take out a train, we shodder to think what would happen. Everybody would leave the train to begin with and the end of it would probably be a Congressional investigation of the evil behavior of railroads, with stern resolutions from the Municipal League. Yet, after all, the possibilities for harm of a steam engine driven by a green engineer are nothing compared with the de-struction that can be wrought by an inexpert automobile driver. The locomotive is at least confined to two rails. It can't run amuck through the traffic like a motor car.

An ordinary automobile drive is becoming an adventure. With the amateur mahout who ecrape the paint off your machines coming up from behind and new drivers who take your breath away trying to dodge you coming down a cross street or from the oppo-site direction, your life is in your hands and your heart is in your mouth. It is notable that the most nervous passengers in touring care are the great automobile racing drivers. They best realize what destruction and havoe a green driver can do.

As automobiles increase in number, the dangers double and treble. The half-baked driver is becoming a real public peril.

The remedy is obvious. No one should be allowed to drive a car until he has passed a careful, thorough examination showing a state of proficiency that fairly entitles him to be trusted with the management of this

POLITICAL UPROAR IN THE GREAT BRITAIN.

Premier Asquith, when deposed, een the political head of the been the political head of the Brit-ish Empire for eight years. The Lib-eral administration went into power in 1906 on the big election cry of "Your 1906 on the big election cry of "Your food will cost you more," as against the tariff reform propagands of Joseph Chamberlain, which set out to revoke Britain's specious policy of free trade. Like our Democratic party, the Liberals had previously been in opposition for the best part of two decades, with brief and calamitous intervals of fleeting power. They stood for a vast variety of Socialistic reforms, for a general upheaval of traditions on the subject of paternalism, for penalizing capsubject of paternalism, for penalizing cap-ifal, for restricting the powers of the sec-ond chamber. But mostly, chiefly, they rose to power on the ashes of the Boer-War, on the uncovered blunders of the Conservative administration in the conduct

But the Liberal party was never the war party. They, too, talked glibly of "peace, prosperity and social reform." They, too, first stood for a curtailment of armaments, even as our Democratic party. They, too, in the light of glaring revelations regarding the warlike preparation of other pow-ers, suddenly plunged into vast military ers, suddenly plunged into vast military and naval expenditures in the face of spirited public opinion—but several years too late. They, too, with all their free-trade faith, found prosperity fleeting and unprotected industries rapidly declining, the treasury depleted, supertaxes necessary to make good their income, and were even, in self-defense, compelled to modify their free-trade aspirations and impose tariffs on certain imports. It was the Liberals who passed the patent law by which all commodities holding a patent in Great Britain were compelled to erect factories for the production of such commodities within the production of such commodities within the country. In fact, the Liberals, like our American Democrata, were forced to reverse themselves on innumerable policies, to eat the planks in their own platform.

And it was upon this demoralized and unpopular political party divided among themselves that the full blow of the great war fell. With all their belated armament will and fatuous international brotherhood assurances, with all their bitter arraignment of the Conservatives' conduct of the Boer War, it was the Liberal party of Great Britain which was caught napping, disorganized, confusion worse confounded. But the usual cry of the danger of swapping horses while crossing the stream was forthcoming. Big controversies and individual differences of opinion were hastily buried, and Britannia, in the biggest crisis of her history, elected to rub along and make the best of the administration she had. It proved to be a dismal and heart-rending decision. Then came the make-shift of the coalition government, of which rending decision. Then came the make-shift of the coalition government of which so much was hoped. This has now had ample time in which to prove its inade-quacy, its incompetency. Once again Brit-ain is faced with a divided Cabinet, a house divided against itself. And now, at this late hour, after two years of well-meaning but handers blunders after ingradible waste but hapless blunders, after incredible waste and bitter disasters, Britain is again re-viewing the situation. And upon one-subject she is assured, Premier Asquith has reigned nigh eight years too long.

Two men have stood out as his possible successors—David Lloyd George, the brilliant Socialistic statesman, or Bonar Law, the titular leader of the Conservative party. The former, daring, spectacular, with a dramatic personality and the creation of 5000 munition factories to his credit. The latter, which received accorded to the control of the control of the credit of the credit of the control of the credit of the credi munition factories to his credit. The latter, quiet, practical, devoid of all spectacular glamor, a calm, unemotional statesman of the solid, persistent, dogged genre, with many useful, undramatic labors to his credit. But the man who can raise an audience to fremy; who can woo the British laborer to unexpected sacrifices; who can create munition factories on his sheer personality; who can hold thousands with his dazzling oratory is not necessarily the most desirable political head of an empire at war. However, at this writing the dispatches declare that Bonar Law has refused the Premiership, and Lloyd George, whose dazzling attributes make for hero-worship, has accepted Britain's highest office.

Lioyd George alone of all the Liberal administration can claim definite achievements. It might have been well for the administration can claim definite achievements. It might have been well for the Liberal peace party if, like President Wilson, it could have claimed to have kept the country out of war; but, masquerading as a militarist party in the greatest war of the world, it has proved itself singularly ridiculous. As it rose to power on the ashes of the Conservative conduct of the Boer War, ultimately successful though it was, so it has met its death knell on the ashes of its own blunders. It is safe to say that few of Lloyd George's Liberal colleagues will remain in his Cabinet.

Among those present to confer with Wilson at the assembling of Congress was Sam Gompers. Sam professes to be interested in the high cost of living, but it hasn't real-ly worried him for several years.

Car shortage is being held responsible for the advance in prices of many commodities. No use of talking; we'll have to build longer cars.

Who wants to talk to a girl under 30, anyhow? Us for the old birds. With the Congressional Record and the moving-picture shows we ought to have a nice, restful winter.

Some of these folks who want to regulate the moving-picture indus-try off the map don't even know

Congress had not convened more than ten minutes before a dozen bills were in the hopper aimed at the high cost of living. It is presumed that every Congressman has opinions which crystallize in the form of a bill. Some of 'em merely dill for investigations of various kinds—at public expense. Others are more drastic and provide punishment for any apparently unwarranted advance in prices. Some want to get after the railroads for not furnishing enough cars to move freight expeditiously. Others would forbid the shipments of food products to Europe, and others would lower the cost of mail or freight rates on bousehold supplies. In the meantime prices will continue responsive to the rule of supply and demand—that is, the man who has an article will get what he can for it and the man who wants it will pay as much as he has to. The laws of the Medes and Persians had nothing on this.

RIPPLING RHYMES. DEFEAT OF HUGHES.

C. Hughes went down to grim defeat because his whiskers were too ong. His hopes have found their winding sheet, and life is not one grand sweet song. He is a man of are blent, he would adorn the highest berth to which he ever might be sent. You may dissect his whole career, with hope to knock him from his perch, and friends of Hughes need never fear the outcome of your busy search. Intelligent, high-minded, clean, he surely should appeal to you; yet when his bunch of brush is seen, the voter says, "He will not do." When he was chosen for the race, I said to him, "Oh, Charley Hughes, clean that aifaifa from your face, and you will win, I'll bet my shoes! But if you let those whiskers bloom, and bear their crop of pods and bolls, you'll march straight downward to your doom—we'll all rebuke you at the polls." "My whiskers are my own concern, replied the stateman, "and that's flat. Rebuke? I do not care a dera." And now we see where he is at. est berth to which he ever might be

Widen the Three-mile Limit.
[Oakland Tribune:] One of the necessary revisions of international law which must be taken up by the court of nations after the war ends is the obsolete, outgrown three-mile limit rule of inviolable neutrality. Owing to the longer effective range of instruments of war, both on ships and on shore, the three-mile limit does not safeguard the neutral interest of a non-belligerent. Neutrals have lost heavily in the present war

The Cornetetone of Life.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat:]
Cooking is a corner-stone of all that mankind can hope to accomplish. As a man eats so is he in a potential working sense. The sky is blue and the world bright to the supeptic. Even armies travel on their stomachs. Sound cooking is a sublime sort of chemistry. Shakespeare must have been bleased with the digestion that waits on appetite, and been familiar with the best eating-houses in London when the Elizabethan age was in flower. The most quoted passage in the poems of the younger Bulwer is one that declifes books and the fine arts, to be all very well, but to dine aright is one of the highest schievements, for civilized man cannot live without cooks.

The Boy of Today,
[Memphis Commercial Appeal:]
The American boy of today has gath-The American boy of today has gathered the swiftness of the age. The oranks that his father played are so puerlie that he does not think it worth while to consider them. He wants to do something big, something dangerous, something with the tincture of the daredevil in it. The old American boy was the boy who plotted and executed mischiëf of the boyish type, who made himself a nuisance, perhaps, to the community in which he lived, yet never mixed meanness with mischief. In short, he was an old-fashioned boy, the embodiment of life, the spirit of impishness. In his place we have the hulking street-corner boy, who travels in gange and becomes the bane of police guardians.

Election Aftermath.

[Boston Transcript:] As astonishing as the new grouping of the States is the new ine-up in the electorate. The Democrats failed to capture the labor vote, and the Republicans failed to hold the farmer vote. The much-abused hyphen cut both ways, and religious prejudice also proved to be a two-edged sword. The German voters in Wisconsin went, for Hughes, and their brethren in Ohio went for Wilson. There was Democratic defection in the cities and Republican defection in the respective sone of influence.

If it were not for the respect for the high office held by President Wilson there would often be occasion for laughter at some of his remarks. At the convention of the National Grange he blamed the high cost of foodstuffs upon the middlemen. How about the farmers who are getting the big prices? Our agriculturists were never so prosperous as now. They are willing to feed the world, but they don't want to do it for less than the highest prices they can get for their products.

for you and your family. An opportunity that can last but a very short time

WHAT more prized or princely present could be conceived? It lasts a lifetime; it is of daily value to all the family; it is a sensible gift that will always pay dividends in pleasure and mental development; it is the biggest gift for the smallest amount—only $1 brings it to your home. It is the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

The New Encyclopaedia Britannica is indispensable to you because of the very complexity of the civilization of which you are a member. It is obvious that no man nowadays can carry in his head all that he needs to know of the vast realm of knowledge that lies outside his own experience. No ordinary books will help him, for they are mere fragments.

But modern ingenuity has come to his assistance. A great book has been devised and perfected, the function of which is Utility. Every man can now increase the sum total of his knowledge by resorting to this useful and neverfailing storehouse of universal information.

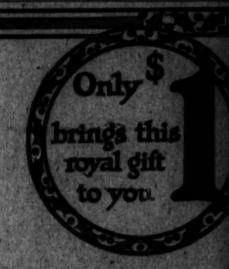

No matter what your situation in life—whether you are a millionaire or a wage-earner, a professional

SAN DIEGO, Dec. 6.—Lieut. Harrold H. Taintor of the Twenty-first Infantry, stationed at the exposition grounds, and recently court-martialed, has brought suit for $10.000 damages against J. Harbs, editor and publisher of the Sud California Deutsche Zeitung, a German newspaper of this city.

It is charged that Harbs libeled Lieut. Taintor by falsely publishing in his paper that Taintor had been court-martialed for repeated check forgeries.

Young Taintor belongs to an old and well-known New York family. He was recently court-martialed for "conduct unbecoming a gentleman and an officer."
